Bananagate charges laid

Multiple tips over several days led to identifying suspect: Police

A 26-year-old London man has expressed remorse for throwing a banana at a black player during last Thursday's NHL game at the John Labatt Centre (JLC), police said yesterday.

Christopher Moorhouse was identified late Tuesday as the person charged in the incident that garnered international media attention, police Chief Brad Duncan said. Charges laid against him include engaging in prohibited activity on premises under the provincial Trespass to Property Act. If convicted, he faces up to a $2,000 fine.

The incident, which involved Philadelphia Flyers forward Wayne Simmonds, did not meet the threshold for a hate-crime charge, Duncan said. For that, officials would need to prove Moorhouse's actions were "motivated by hatred," the chief said.

A criminal charge of mischief was ruled out, Duncan said, partly because gameplay was not interrupted when the banana landed on the ice. The incident occurred when Simmonds was the first shooter in the shootout of Philadelphia's 4-3 loss to the Detroit Red Wings.

Moorhouse has retained a lawyer and has given an explanation for his actions, Duncan said. The explanation is not being made public at this time.

Duncan made a public appeal that Moorhouse be given due process and warned against acts of "vigilantism." "We don't want individuals to go beyond what the court would do," Duncan said.

Officials at the JLC did not say whether Moorhouse will be allowed to return to the venue.

"We have zero tolerance when it comes to this type of foolish behaviour," Comcast-Spectacor president Peter Luukko said in a statement. ● ANGELA MULLINS

'Disappointment': Grandmother

Christopher Moorhouse graduated from Saunders Secondary School and recently had been taking courses in police foundations at Fanshawe College. He also works at a retail store in London.

His grandmother, who didn't want to be identified, said she's crushed by news of the charges.

"It's just a great big disappointment to me. It was a terrible act," she said. "His father and I saw it on the news and said, 'Who would do a thing like that?'" AM980/AM980.CA

Green voice still heard

Latest polls show the Green party controlling five per cent of the vote

LIA GRAINGER
LONDON@METRONEWS.CA

While the NDP, PC and Liberal leaders went head to head Tuesday night, the Green Party of Ontario was hosting its own rally in protest of their exclusion from the only televised leaders' debate in this provincial election.

About a hundred Green Party members gathered at the headquarters of the party's Toronto riding to hear what leader Mike Schreiner would have said had he been included in the televised proceedings.

THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

▶ Mike Schreiner

"The debate is happening down the street, and we need to shout to show them we're here, and that the GPO will not be silenced," said Schreiner.

The party will run a full slate of 107 candidates in this election, and at least a dozen of them were on hand Tuesday evening.

"I'm not impressed," said Anthony Navarro, a volunteer from Ajax-Pickering. "I was really hoping we'd have a voice, considering the number of votes we've gotten compared to other independents."

Schreiner would have raised issues including the creation of a carbon tax, freezing tuition rates, lowering energy costs by reducing energy usage, and controlling health-care costs by improving access to healthy food.

Poll results

▶ An Ipsos Reid poll released Monday found that 76 per cent of Ontarians agreed Schreiner should have been allowed to participate in the debate.

Metro solidified as most read daily in Canada

Metro Canada's readership has continued to grow, making it the most read national daily newspaper in the country, according to results released yesterday by the Newspaper Audience Databank (NADbank).

Metro Canada now reaches 1.39-million readers daily and 3.2-million readers weekly in Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver. Statistics are not available yet for Metro's newest markets, London and Winnipeg.

Compared to NADbank 2009-10 results, this represents a three per cent increase of 34,600 daily readers. Weekly, the increase is of 369,600, or 13 per cent.

In cities where they go head-to-head, Metro Canada reaches more adults over 18 than the Globe and Mail and National Post combined.

"The NADbank results confirm that Metro continues to resonate with our readers: 1.4 million YAMs (youthful, active metropolitans) every day of the week, coast to coast", said Bill McDonald, president and publisher of Metro English Canada.

"A focus on continuous improvement and innovation has been a critical part of our success. Increased coverage of news that matters to readers, especially local news, along with enhanced distribution strategies and creative marketing initiatives have all contributed to this amazing growth. And with the recent additions of Winnipeg and London, we anticipate our national reach will continue to grow well into the future." METRO

Sights are set on a new downtown

- New vision for downtown unveiled
- More residential space to include highrises and low-density housing

ANGELA MULLINS
@METRONEWS.CA

Two main themes run throughout a plan for overhauling downtown: Creating more residential space and reconnecting with the Thames River, city officials said.

The plan, unveiled to city council yesterday, focuses on about 10 spots in the city bound roughly by city hall on the north, The Forks on the west and South Street Hospital on the southeast.

Highlights of the vision — developed after many conversations and a downtown summit — include multiple walkways and turnouts along the river, the possibility of blocking traffic on Dundas Street from Waterloo Street to The Forks during certain hours of the day, and turning the Dufferin Avenue block where city hall sits into an "education square."

The education square would see city hall used for classrooms while Centennial Hall would be transformed into student residences. The berm that surrounds much of the block would be lowered to create a more walkable feel into adjacent Victoria Park.

The area around the John Labatt Centre and the Covent Garden Market would also get a facelift. A highrise apartment building would tower above the downtown skyline, built in what is now a parking lot on the southwest side of the John Labatt Centre. The area between the market and the centre could become a "transportation hub" for downtown buses.

Other features of the proposal include closing the Thames River bridge south of Museum London to vehicles and creating a walkway to bridge downtown with Labatt Park, and adjusting the flow of traffic on Kensington Bridge, which is north of the museum. Traffic signals would allow traffic to travel west or east on the bridge, depending on the time of day, officials said.

An "urban beach" would be built north of the bridges near the Thames River.

While the plan has been dubbed City of Opportunity: A Vision for Downtown London, it's really more than a vision, said Jeff Fielding, the city's chief administrative officer.

Most of the property involved in the plan is either owned by a group that partners with the city or the city itself, Fielding said.

"It's not just giving you a 'what if' (suggestion)," Fielding said. "It's possible … given the right investment strategy over a number of years."

Points of interest

Areas that are the focus of a new plan for downtown:

- South of Horton St. (the existing South Street Hospital site)
- London Hydro property (along the Thames River, near the Labatt plant)
- John Labatt Centre/ Covent Garden Market
- Market Lane (between Dundas and Covent Garden Market)
- Dundas Street
- Dufferin Avenue and Wellington Street
- Richmond Row (near Victoria Park)
- Queens Avenue and Ridout Street
- The Forks

Cyber-calamity just a click away

Canucks exposing themselves to unnecessary risks

There are enemies lurking in your computer and they can harm you.

That was the message yesterday from a prominent Canadian think tank.

Canadians don't know enough about the technology they rely on every day and may be exposing themselves to unnecessary cyber-risks, said the Conference Board of Canada.

Think viruses, hackers or scam artists.

That knowledge gap needs to be closed in order to protect individuals, organizations and governments from cybercrime, the board said.

John Neily, the board's director of national security and public safety, said people often use email, social media and other Internet-based applications without taking time to consider the dangers.

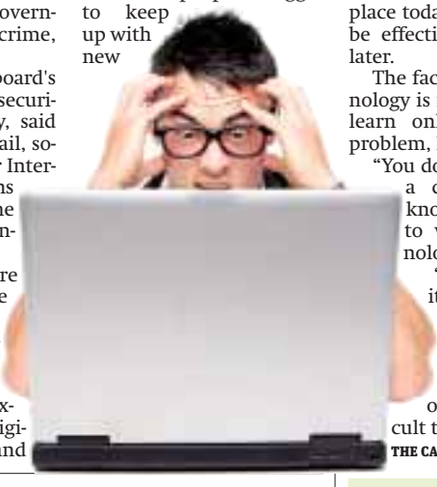
"The risks that are involved in using the digital technologies, we're actually somewhat ignorant of those," Neily said.

"They actually exacerbate our own digital vulnerability, and we can accidentally ... endanger the security of others."

People still engage in risky online behaviour, such as downloading suspicious attachments from dubious emails, Neily said.

Those simple clicks could spread destructive software throughout a technology infrastructure and cause untold accidental harm, he added.

The rapid pace of technological evolution also poses a problem, Neily added, as people struggle to keep up with new programs on the market. The safeguards put in place today may no longer be effective a few weeks later.



The fact that most technology is relatively easy to learn only adds to the problem, he said.

"You don't need to have a certain level of knowledge in order to work with technology," he said.

"Anyone can use it. As a result, that in and of itself can allow a person to get into areas that are otherwise difficult to manage."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

The human threat

- The human element cannot be underestimated, Neily said.
- Some of the most aggressive threats are delivered through less-than-modern channels such as a con artist tricking a victim into providing a password over the phone or a thief rifling through the garbage to obtain information.

A cold case is suddenly hot again. Quebec police say they have dramatic new information in a 12-year-old missing-persons case. Julie Surprenant was 16 when she disappeared in 1999. But a nurse at a Laval hospital has told a reporter that a man dying of cancer confessed five years ago to her murder. The convicted sex offender said he dumped her body in a river.

Condoms sabotaged

A Nova Scotia judge has convicted a man of sexual assault for having intercourse with his girlfriend after he poked holes in her condoms.

Justice Richard Coughlan of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia yesterday found Craig Jaret Hutchinson, 41, of Clyde River not guilty of aggravated sexual assault but guilty of the lesser offence.

The woman from Halifax became pregnant and had an abortion.

Coughlan said Hutchinson aimed to have a baby with the woman, who cannot be identified under a publication ban.

Sentencing is Dec. 2.

He apologizes

- The woman testified she was unable to take birth control pills for medical reasons, so the couple relied on condoms.
- The judge read a text message from Hutchinson in which he apologizes for poking the holes in the condoms and says, "I wanted a baby with you so."

Blond, red-headed sperm donors rejected due to lack of demand

CHRISTIAN KLOSTER
METRO WORLD NEWS

A sperm bank in Denmark is no longer accepting donations from blond and red-haired men.

The Cryos International sperm bank in Aarhus said its "Nordic" sperm — including 140,000 doses from redheads — is being sold at a discount due to lack of demand.

"We have too much sperm from men with Scandinavian features, and relatively few customers request it, so we're attempting to sell it at a lower price — a sale, if you will," Cryos director Ole Schou told Metro.

Sperm from dark-haired, brown-eyed men sells at the normal price, Schou added.

"We sell out very quickly, and we haven't yet managed to recruit enough dark-haired, brown-eyed donors.

"Currently, we turn away all donor candidates with blond, dark-blond and red hair as well as blue, grey and green eyes. Instead, we're looking for those with dark hair and brown eyes."

Schou stresses the sperm bank does not discriminate against race or ethnicity — he simply wants to deliver the type of sperm the customers ask for.

A great number of Cryos' customers live in Spain, Italy and Greece, where they are not looking for a blond, blue-eyed addition to the family.

Donating anger

- Cryos says it has faced an angry backlash over its refusal to accept donors with red hair.
- "We have received a number of complaints from redheads from all over the world," says Ole Schou.
- "Some are very angry, even aggressive. They accuse us of racism."
- Schou apologizes to those who feel offended.
- "I can assure you we don't discriminate against anyone. We have nothing against redheads. We're simply trying to meet the demands of our customers, and the demand for red-headed and blond sperm donors is very limited."

Saudi king overturns female driver's sentence

Saudi King Abdullah has overturned a court ruling sentencing a Saudi woman to be lashed 10 times for defying the kingdom's ban on female drivers, a government official said.

The official declined to elaborate on the monarch's decision, and spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to brief the media.

A Saudi court on Tuesday found Shaima Jastaina guilty of violating the driving ban, and sentenced her to 10 lashes. The verdict took Saudi women by surprise, coming just a day after King Abdullah promised to protect women's rights and decreed that women would be allowed to participate in municipal elections in 2015.

Abdullah also promised to appoint women to a currently all-male advisory body known as the Shura Council.

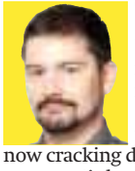
NOW THAT'S USING YOUR HEAD

HE SAYS ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE
METRO



I don't know whether it's good that most of the buzz heading into the new NHL season is that the league is actually punishing players when they attempt to decapitate each other.

I'm glad the league is enforcing its rulebook, but it feels like applauding your neighbourhood restaurant because they've finally dealt with the rat hair.

Yes, the league — after decades of downplaying violence as "part of the game" — is now cracking down if players are reckless with an opponent's braincase.

Such is the NHL that this is considered a breakthrough.

In case you don't eat/breathe/sweat/secrete/expectorate hockey like me, here's the deal. For years, NHL discipline worked like this:

• One player attacks another, possibly with a chainsaw (this is a fanciful example and only happened a couple of times).

• The league notes that there is no mention of a chainsaw in the rulebook, so its hands are tied.

• The players say hockey is a fast game and the attacker probably just meant to use the chainsaw as a bludgeon.

• During the next game, the chainsaw wielder and an "enforcer" on the other team have a fistfight. This makes everything OK.

This system worked for a while, but what do you think the league did when great players such as Pat LaFontaine and Eric Lindros had their careers cut short?

If you said, "Nothing!" then you have a bright future as a National Hockey League commissioner.

"No, what it took for the league to take action was for Sidney Crosby — both a Penguin and a cash cow — to be knocked out for most of last season. It's hard to be the face of the NHL when your cranium is caved in."

No, what it took for the league to take action was for Sidney Crosby — both a Penguin and a cash cow — to be knocked out for most of last season. It's hard to be the face of the NHL when your cranium is caved in.

So the league hired a new disciplinarian (former player Brendan Shanahan) to replace the old one (a macaque with a Magic 8-Ball). Shanahan swiftly handed out a huge eight-game suspension — your salary for a year, basically — because of a simple hit from behind. It used to be that an eight-game suspension probably involved an autopsy, at minimum.

The league's website even has a slick "Suspensions" section, tucked in between the highlights and the pro shop. This is either heartening or depressing.

The league — which was slow to enforce hooking and holding penalties, to shrink goaltender's equipment, to ban head shots — usually makes the right decision eventually — but almost always one moment too late.

A little anticipation would be nice. Or as Gretzky might put it, the league needs to learn to go where the screw-ups are going to be, not where they've been.

Mahy, 26, is the creative director and founder of Artfusion, a local pop-up art gallery showcasing urban art. Each month, Mahy along with a team of artists and volunteers set up shop in a local venues exhibiting and selling the work of London talent. But as of today, the gallery won't be on rotation through the city — instead it will become a permanent part of the local art community, finding a home at Citi Plaza on Wellington Road.

"I've always had the dream to run a gallery," says Mahy. "Starting in high school, I knew so many artists and had so much work of my own, I knew I wanted to open a full-time gallery."

Since then, Mahy's Artfusion has showcased the work of more than 200 local visual artists and displaying more than 3,500 pieces of original art in 10 downtown venues.

Mahy says his artists range in age from 17 to 93, each finding an outlet through Artfusion.

"Every show I am blown away by the talent of this city. Every show the work keeps getting better and better — that is what motivates me to keep working towards this goal," Mahy says.

Today's gallery opening will be a retrospective of Artfusion's history, favourite pieces from the past two years and countless exhibits, being displayed along with new works.

"For every person who walks in the door, I want at least one piece to catch their eye," Mahy says. "I want to keep introducing people to something new and keep driving the modern art movement, exposing London's real talent."

The grand opening starts at 7 p.m. with local music performances and runs until 2 a.m. at 355 Wellington Rd. inside Citi Plaza.

Jessica Simpson is reportedly pregnant, but she's not letting that change her November wedding plans, according to In Touch.

"Jessica might have to take out her dress a bit," but the wedding is still on, a source says, adding that Simpson and fiancé Eric Johnson consider the impending arrival "the best wedding gift ever." And, the source adds, the pregnancy is already having an effect on the singer. "She's already having kooky cravings," the friend says. METRO

THE BEST COATS: Sportmax

This season, the secondary line outshone its big sister label, Max Mara, literally. The collection was filled with shiny metallics and raver prints in shimmery fabrics that worked best when kept to a minimum, such as the lining on a series of trench coats.

Bring on the bling

Despite Italy's flailing economy, Milan Fashion Week oozed luxury and decadence, from Gucci's gold embroidered dresses to Cavalli's blingtastic minis

METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

GETTY IMAGES

DRIPPING WITH GOLD: GUCCI

Gucci kicked off the week with a collection that oozed luxury and was almost entirely dedicated to decadent evening dressing. Frida Giannini's clothes (which she called Hard Deco) were dipped, embroidered and accented with gold. It appeared everywhere — as buttons lining an ankle slit on trousers, bands of hardware around drop-waist dresses, the embroidery on a jacket and as the tip on a pointy-toed stiletto.

GETTY IMAGES

SEXY GARDEN PRINTS: DOLCE & GABBANA

The garden-inspired prints were broken up with pretty lace coats and dresses embroidered with floral appliqués, bejeweled playsuits and cocktail dresses embellished to the hilt in tassels and rhinestones. It was a sexier follow-up to last season's starry dresses that appeared all over the red carpet and on countless September issue covers. Bottom line: Expect celebrities to be covered in fruit and veg next spring.

GETTY IMAGES

FUN AND FLAMBOYANT: DSQUARED2

Dan and Dean Caten's runway shows are always flamboyant productions that add fun and humour to Milan Fashion Week. But yesterday's show was a classic case of staging trumping the clothes. They created an impressive Glastonbury-like set that looked great until the models, dressed in sexy, clingy bodysuits and dresses, began to slip and fall on the muddy runway. But they scored high marks for realism.

GETTY IMAGES

BRAZENLY BLINGTASTIC: ROBERTO CAVALLI

Milan Fashion Week started off with a gold moment (Gucci's.) So it only makes sense that it ended with one too. In a collection that was like a middle finger to Italy's flailing economy, Roberto Cavalli opened his show with brazenly flamboyant, blingtastic mini-dresses, skirts, blazers and sinuous gowns covered in the kind of embellished gold regalia that could blind someone.

Chilly decorating mistakes

How to make your place seasonally stylish and cosy for fall and winter

DESIGN CENTRE

KARL LOHNES
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

Changing up the look of your place with each change of season is a great way to follow trends without spending a lot of money — a few tabletop vases, some pillows, candles and throws can change a room's feel for the cold weather months.

Buying good decor basics, like a neutral sofa, proper sized dining table and some unique artwork, can help accessorize seasonally without breaking the bank. Here's a few common mistakes people make when attempting fall and winter decorating.

Trying to hide your television: Families watch the TV more in the winter. It is a necessity when it comes to entertainment for most homes.

If your TV hangs above a fireplace mantle, make sure to attach it to a swivel bracket so it can slant down into the room for easier viewing.

If choosing a console, go for a useful yet decorative one that looks like a piece of matching furniture in your room.

Displaying family portraits: Unless you have famous or royal family members I suggest enjoying your framed faces in a more private setting like a bedroom (although do you really want them all looking at you?). Put portraits in hallways, the office or the den.

POTTERY BARN

▶ The right accessories can create a cosy fall retreat.

I STOCK

▶ A modern fabric and paint colour can help to modernize an outdated antique.

Plastering furniture along the perimeter of a room: "What? are you having a town hall dance in the living room?"

Bringing the sofa in from the walls a few inches and arranging furniture in more intimate groupings will create more personal seating arrangements and actually make a narrow or small room feel larger.

Rule of thumb: no seating arrangement should separate people more than 14 feet apart from one another.

The row of three uptight candles: You know those candles — the ones that must be displayed in a perfect row, spaced exactly four inches apart from one another.

What you are left with is three bright flames gathered to draw your eyes to one side of a room.

Separate and scatter candles to create an even glow around the room.

Use flameless LED candles to add ambience on bookshelves, window sills and picture ledges.

Floating a tiny rug in the middle of a large room: Rugs are meant to tie furnishings together, not to sit lonely in the centre of the room to be admired.

If the front legs of the sofa and chairs are not sitting on the rug in your living or family room, then the rug is too small for that area.

In the dining room, the rug should be a minimum 18 inches larger on each side of the table.

Displaying family heirlooms that do not reflect your style: How many times have you made excuses for unmatched hand-me-downs?

You may as well be saying "Don't mind that old wooden coffin in the corner — that's just Grandma!"

If you have a piece of furniture that doesn't follow suit with your decor scheme, then have it refinished to a wood stain colour or upholstery fabric that helps it blend in.

If it is artwork that looks outdated then consider having it re-framed with a more up to date frame for a fresh look.

If that doesn't work there is bound to be some jealous relative that wants it more than you ever did, so pass it along.

Hanging artwork too high: You know when someone has hung their artwork too high — the paintings look like they are creeping up the walls away from the sofa, your head is angled toward the ceiling and when you sit in a room you stare at the bottom of the picture frame.

The rule of thumb is that your artwork is hung about 10 to 12 inches from the top of the sofa, credenza or desk.

If the art is not hung above a piece of furniture then on an empty wall the middle should be a 66 to 70 inches off the floor.

Ask the Expert: Mortgage Insurance

As a Financial Advisor with Sun Life Financial, I cannot express how thrilled I am to be back in the Forest City. After graduating from Carleton University with a degree in Economics, I knew my passion and goal in life was to assist and help families re-gain control of their financial matters and have an impact on their overall success and happiness.

With a strong background of financial advising in Ottawa and working in management for one of the leading providers of insurance and investments in Canada, I have seen all too often individuals and families left unprotected. Whether it be the unforeseen loss of a loved one or an illness which has led negatively to a lower than par quality of life, families need to be financially protected. In our lifetime alone, we have seen a massive shift in government benefits leading us to be pro-active in determining and implementing a proper financial plan to fit our unique lifestyle.

I look forward to getting involved with the London community and meeting with families to help them become better protected against the unknowns in life as well as achieving success along the way to retirement.

There's always next year for Jays

It has become a familiar end-of-season routine for the Toronto Blue Jays.

Mediocre record. Some cause for optimism. Another fourth-place finish.

However, there appears to be something different about this edition of the Jays. Fuelled by franchise player Jose Bautista and an exciting young core, there is an energy in the clubhouse and among fans in a city starved for a contender.

"We have a bunch of guys that really have nothing to lose and just want to go out there and win," said outfielder Eric Thames.

"That's what we're out here every day working hard for and hopefully next year we'll come a lot closer to that ring, if not win the ring."

Toronto ended its season yesterday by rallying for a 3-2 win in Chicago against the White Sox. That gave the Jays an 81-81 record.

General manager Alex Anthopoulos has stocked the farm system and young players like ace Ricky Romero, catcher J.P. Arencibia and Canadian third baseman Brett Lawrie appear to be the real deal. Whether the holes in the team's roster can be filled for next year is the big question.

Manger John Farrell predicts the 34-year-old GM will be a busy man.

"Every area is going to be looked at," Farrell said. "The one great thing about Alex is there's no stone left unturned."

A new day in Buffalo

Bills reaping benefits of change in philosophy under second-year coach

One of coach Chan Gailey's first acts upon taking over the Buffalo Bills some 20 months ago was having the TV sets removed from the weight room in a bid to instill a business-first focus.

His next order of business was far less cosmetic, and much more daunting. It involved Gailey attempting to transform what he saw as the telltale signs of a losing culture on a team that's spent an entire decade missing the playoffs.

"Every time you take over a team in a new situation, you're trying to change the mindset from hoping to win to expecting to win," Gailey reiterated several times last year.

"I don't have any magic potion. I don't have any fancy words. The guys are doing it."
BUFFALO BILLS HEAD COACH CHAN GAILEY

Nineteen games into Gailey's tenure, the Bills' transformation into becoming a more confident team is showing signs of blossoming, as linebacker Chris Kelsay put it yesterday.

Defensive lineman Kyle Williams had a more blunt explanation, an indication of how much the Bills are starting to believe in themselves.

"There's only so much you can talk about expecting to win," Williams said. "Confidence comes with winning and not talking about it."

The Bills have earned the right to talk proud once again in getting off to a 3-0 start in preparing to play at Cincinnati (1-2) on Sunday.

A year after a 4-12 finish, Buffalo is one of three unbeaten teams remaining in the NFL. And the Bills are coming off stunning back-to-back comebacks in which they've rallied from double-digit deficits, first against Oakland and then last weekend's stunning 34-31 win over New England.

It's a stirring turnaround for a team that a year ago that didn't win its first game until Week 10.

"Changes needed to be made," centre Eric Wood said. "No TVs in the weight room, that's nothing to give up for a new atmosphere, for a new mentality in here." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NBA talks reach critical phase

"We still have a great deal of issues to work through, so there won't be any magic that will happen this weekend to just make those things go away."
NBA PLAYERS' ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT DEREK FISHER

NBA owners and players will meet tomorrow and perhaps through the weekend with commissioner David Stern warning there are "enormous consequences at play" as the two sides try to preserve an on-time start to the season.

Talks ended after two days yesterday so negotiators could return home before summoning their respective bargaining committees to New York for the most important stretch of the lockout. They are prepared to meet through the weekend if progress toward a new collective bargaining agreement is being made.

With the Nov. 1 season opener a little more than a month away, Stern said there would be "a lot of risk" to not having an agreement by the end of this week.

But both sides said there hasn't been enough progress to put them on the verge of a deal.
